Chapter 1 by Yutyut4

Ok so I'm here to talk about a concept i came up with. It goes along with supertasks and gabriel's cake. So it has to be a theory. If someone could finish gabriels cake it would be infinity tall. But if many were finished and you made a wall out of gabriel's cake? I'm saying that this wall will cover the land on the equator. Now say an army wants to get past this wall. One person runs through getting cake on themselves. They get to the other side. Maybe after like 100 men get through the wall before became so thin and had such a high power of gravity pushing down on it. Though many factors would play into this. If gabriel's cake was made it would have to be pretty much have each piece pushed a little into the last. And if it did fall that fast would it burn up in the atmosphere? Well that probably would not happen early on because of the speed the cake has. It would just need pressure and thinness. Causing a world shattering event. if falling and still connected the cake could fall onto far north and south areas of the world. Destruction! What if the whole wall started to fall at once. anyone not indoors would likely die of having extremely thin cake cut through their brain. Though some people may say that it's cake and nothing would happen. Though cakes... could destroy the world. -Yutyut4
